"The Philadelphia Experiment: The Story Behind The Invisibility Project"
A very detailed and thought provoking presentation by Brian Halliwell

The mysterious events of 1943 when it was alleged a Navy Destroyer Escort vessel at the Philadelphia Naval Yard was made to disappear for several minutes during an Electronic Camouflage Experiment. It apparently involved a " High Intensified Magnetic Field " in which the crew either fell ill, went mad or died and in some cases some said they were propelled into other dimensions inhabited by strange beings? It has also been alleged the ship not only became invisible but also teleported to Norfolk 200 miles away then back again to Philadelphia in a matter of minutes. It is said the Experiment never took place or did it ? This talk will explore this incredible story. Brian is an exceptional live speaker.

"Denial Of The Bosnian Pyramids: Biggest Hoax in History!"

An intriguing and stunning presentation by Richard Hoyle

Richard did an exceptional presentation for us in April 2011. He's since been back to Bosnia for another summer and consequently has much more to show us. While studying Geology at University Richard began researching alternative theories for the origins and purposes of the Great Pyramids of Egypt. After spending time at Giza his research lead him to the Bosnian Pyramids, which according to the latest evidence, are the biggest and oldest Pyramids on the planet so far discovered. He has now been working for two years on the excavations, closely with Dr Semirs Pyramid of the Sun foundation as well as being a member of the multidisciplinary research group SBRG. The discoveries being made in Bosnia have the potential to change all of our lives and of course our history must be rewritten. Richard will discuss the latest research and findings including the electromagnetic energy beams, ultrasound emissions and possible theories for the function of these huge structures and accompanying tunnel networks. Stunning jaw dropping information.

"No One To Vote For"- We are delighted to present the remarkable Kevin Boyle

All the way from London, Kevin has made quite a name for himself with the <http://kevboyle.blogspot.com/> where his many top class articles and excellent commentaries have been picked up and used by numerous truth seeking web sites. In a world where nothing is as it seems Kevin is like a breath of fresh air as he gives us his unique insight into much of the current events and seems able to clinically examine what's really going on. Kevin will also discuss and compare the psychology and spirituality of people seeking the truth and those who furtively try to keep the truth from us. Investigating what experience and historical fact suggest regarding any meaningful long term political solution to the problems that we, at least, can recognise as solvable problems and not an unchangeable given. Putting forward solutions that will last, will require a savage, uncompromising and community self imposed idealism to achieve a world devoid of hierarchy, certainly any hierarchy that dominates rather than serves. A thought provoking and radical presentation that is highly recommended. Not to be missed.

"Human Farming: The Story Of Your Enslavement"

A powerful and thought provoking talk by the outstanding Navid Masud

The Matrix is one of the greatest metaphors ever. Machines invented to make human life easier end up enslaving humanity - this is the most common theme in dystopian science fiction. Why is this fear so universal - so compelling? Is it because we really believe that our toaster and our notebook will end up as our mechanical overlords? Of course not. This is not a future that we fear, but a past that we are already living. Supposedly, governments were invented to make human life easier and safer, but governments always end up enslaving humanity. That which we create to "serve" us ends up ruling us. The US government "by and for the people" now imprisons millions, takes half the national income by force, over-regulates, punishes, tortures, slaughters foreigners, invades countries, overthrows governments, imposes 700 imperialistic bases overseas, inflates the currency, and crushes future generations with massive debts. That which we create to "serve" us ends up ruling us. The problem with the "state as servant" thesis is that it is historically completely false, both empirically and logically. The idea that states were voluntarily invented by citizens to enhance their own security is utterly untrue. Before governments, in tribal times, human beings could only produce what they consumed - there was no excess production of food or other resources. Thus, there was no point owning slaves, because the slave could not produce any excess that could be stolen by the master. If a horse pulling a plough can only produce enough additional food to feed the horse, there is no point hunting, capturing and breaking in a horse. However, when agricultural improvements allowed for the creation of excess crops, suddenly it became highly advantageous to own human beings. When cows began to provide excess milk and meat, owning cows became worthwhile. The earliest governments and empires were in fact a ruling class of slave hunters, who understood that because human beings could produce more than they consumed, they were worth hunting, capturing, breaking in - and owning. In modern times nothing has really changed only the manner in which ownership rights are exercised has evolved and become more sophisticated but at its core the same principles are at play. A powerful, passionate and very thought provoking presentation. A must see.

"The Surveillance State Exposed 2012" - A remarkable presentation by Charles Farrier

For many years there have been warnings that the unquestioning acceptance of mass surveillance could lead to a nightmarish world where the only privacy left will be the thoughts in your head. Many saw this as an over-reaction or the stuff of science fiction, but technological advances mean that we are about to see the size and scale of surveillance explode once again. How can we stop the nightmare coming true? Topics will include: the development of military grade surveillance drones for civilian use, the ever expanding network of number plate cameras forming "rings of steel" around our towns and cities, Project Javelin, the 2011 riots and CCTV wanted posters, the 2012 Olympics and the surveillance arms race, why the Protection of Freedoms Bill will not protect your freedoms. Get informed, visit www.no-cctv.org.uk. Very highly recommended.

“The Art Of Social Control Through Social Conditioning And Indoctrination”

A real though provoking presentation by Tony Green

“Those who manipulate the organised habits and opinions of the masses constitute an invisible government which is the true ruling power of the country. As civilisation has become more complex, and as the need for invisible government has been increasingly demonstrated, the technical means have been invented and developed by which opinion may be regimented” - Edward Bernays, Psychologists and Propagandist, Propaganda, 1928. This talk will provide an insight to the generally ignored programmes of psychological operations & social conditioning used by governments, militaries and intelligence groups on their target populations. Social engineering is a standard technique of creating, moulding and guiding views, perceptions and the identities of a target population to fit to a required social, economic or political agenda. These techniques are as old as civilisation itself as social and political manipulations are the cornerstone of all minority-controlled populations. Advancing understandings in psychology and sociology have facilitated more efficient avenues of manipulation of the perceptions of individuals and populations by interested parties. Terms such as “perception management” and “consent engineering” highlight the mentality of governments, militaries and intelligence groups towards freethinking among populations. The controlling of populations by physical force is not only difficult, expensive and time-consuming but also it is inefficient and ineffective especially in an age of advance technology and understandings in psychology and sociology. Modern systems of control allow easier methods of harnessing a population's labour power. These include predictive programming and social engineering. Predictive programming is the creation or manipulation of a population's behaviour patterns to suit long term political, social, military and economic agendas. This talk looks at how methods of predictive programming have made populations content with their current social decline. All the information in this talk is presented with referenced material. A remarkable presentation from an exceptional man. Don't miss it.
